Tongue, Liverwort, Agrimony, and Ground-Ivy, 2 Handfuls each; Crude Antimony, 1 Pound grossly powder'd, and ty'd in a Rag by it self.

This is good against that Kind of Scurvy, which arises from Excess of Choler, and hot acid Humours; because most of the Ingredients are of a softening Nature, and will blunt the rigid irritating Particles of the Blood, and prevent the Mischief it does to the Fibres, and small Glands. The continued use of it will be of great service to smooth and soften sharp Humours, and remove all those Disorders that arise from a hot irritating Blood. It may be drank at Discretion. The Wort must be very strong, else the Juices will make it turn sour. Of this kind of Anti-scorbutick, he says, we have the least Choice, tho' it deserves as much Regard as any.

The Third he calls An opening Drink against the Scurvy. Take Roots of sharp-pointed Dock, half a Pound; Horse-Raddish, 2 Ounces; Guaiacum, 4 Ounces; Juniper-berries, Orange-peel, of each 1 Ounce; Winter-Bark, Mustard-Seed, Long-Pepper, Cloves, 2 Drachms each; Raisins of the Sun 4 Ounces; Scurvy-grass, Brook-lime, Water Cress, Clovers, 4 Handfuls each; put all in a Bag, and hang it in 4 Gallons of Ale.

This is most convenient where People are over-bulky, and inclinable to Rheumatisms, and Dropses; for it fills the Blood with subtil, volatile, and pungent Particles, and renders it more fluid, and fitter for Circulation; so that 'tis quite contrary, in it's Use, and Design, to the Scurvy-Drink last mention'd.

The Fourth is a Drink against the King's Evil, and prepar'd thus: Take Sarsaparilla, 6 Ounces
Ounces; Guaiacum, eight Ounces; Bark of Walnut-tree; Roots of Scrofularia, and Sassafras, each two Ounces; Herb Robert, three Handfuls; Raisins ston'd, living Millepodes, a Pound each. Put 'em into a Bag among 4 Gallons of Ale, but the Doctor says, 'tis better to boil the Woods in the Wort, and to put the tender Ingredients with the Hog-Lice into a Bag, and hang it in the Barrel; but thinks the Quantity of Guaiacum, too large. He says, it is very good in a high Scurvy; for he reckons the Evil to be a Diftermper of that kind, and says, this Drink cannot fail of doing service, if continu'd for sometime as common drink.

THE Fifth is another Ale against the King's Evil, and prepar'd thus: Take Chips of Guaiacum, Sassafras, Walnut-tree-bark, Roots of Sharp-pointed Dock, Filipendula, and Hounds-Tongue, each 2 Ounces; Herb-Robert, Arch-angel, each four Handfuls; Raisins of the Sun ston'd and living Millepodes, of each a Pound: Prepare all these for 4 Gallons.

The Doctor here also, as well as in the former, advises, that the Guaiacum, and Sassafras, be boil'd with the Wort, and then strain'd, for they will not give out their Virtues so much in the Fermentation. He says, 'tis very assifling in the cure of old running Ulcers, and an effectual Cleanser of all Foulnesses of the Skin, and even the Leprosy. He adds, that it ought to be made a common Drink, and continued some Time, to answer in any Intention of Moment.

THE Sixth is that which he calls an Aperient Ale, and made thus: Take Roots of Succory, Male-Fern, Liquorice, and the Five opening Roots, each 2 Ounces; Harts-Tongue, Liverwort, Ground-Ivy, Tamarisk-tops, each 2 Handfuls; Juniper-ber-
